

The “Not My Kid” Town Hall events offer parents the opportunity to learn from an interdisciplinary group of professionals dedicated to reducing substance abuse. A panel comprised of professionals from law enforcement, treatment, recovery and prevention combine with school staff to inform parents about important drug trends, strategies for communicating about substance abuse and how to guide your children to make decisions in their own best interest. Topics will include prevention underage and binge drinking, the region’s recent surge in black tar heroin, what parents can do about substance abuse and more. These events typically thrive on the questions of concerned parents.

The next ‘Not My Kid’ Town Hall will be delivered through Parent University at Martin Luther King, Jr. Middles School on March 16 @ 6:30 p.m.
